In 2002, Cyrena Gibson was a single parent working two jobs and going to school full time to earn her bachelor's degree when she injured her back. She didn't have insurance and was concerned about the cost of care she would need.

That's when she turned to the Hope Clinic for help.

The Hope Clinic offers free medical and dental care, and also provides emergency financial assistance to those in need.

With help from the Hope Clinic, Gibson was able to heal.

When she joined the Michigan Department of Corrections in 2005, she learned the Hope Clinic was one of the more than 1,000 outstanding organizations supported by the State Employees Charitable Campaign.

Now she gives back every year to the organization that got her back on her feet by making a donation through the SECC.
